DISCOVER SCHOLARWORKS

The thesis is written. The dissertation is submitted. You've poured yourself into the creation of the document in front of you. Now what? Consider submitting to ScholarWorks, an open access collection of work done at MSU and by MSU students, faculty, and staff. The ScholarWorks website says it best. "ScholarWorks is a central point of discovery for accessing, collecting, sharing, preserving, and distributing knowledge to the MSU community and the world."

When a document is accepted to ScholarWorks, the author allows for increased access and visibility to scholars around the world. Sharing your work in an open access collection also can increase downloads and citations, contributing the knowledge base and conversation in your field.

Interested in contributing? Contact Leila Sterman, Scholarly Communication Librarian, at the MSU Library. Or check out: www.scholarworks.montana.edu.

CONGRATS, GRADS!

And great work to all MSU students, faculty, and staff for another successful year. Have a great summer break, and we'll see you back in the library this fall!

TIP OF THE MONTH

Need a break from summer heat?

The library has special hours between summer sessions and during the summer semester. Updated hours can be found to the left and on our website.
