

Sculpture and drawings
by Marilyn Hurn Mohr

A thesis submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Fine Arts
Montana State University
© Copyright by Marilyn Hurn Mohr (1985)

Abstract:

My images come from two sources: the inner world of dreams and the outer world of nature. I use metaphor, sensuous appeal, and formal relationships to achieve meaning.

Organic forms are the source of the metaphors I use: plant and animal forms refer to ideas of growth; transformation, infinite variation, and cycles of change. I want to combine the organic references with ideas of integration, security, and alienation. A single humansized sculpture speaks of the simultaneous alienation and yearning to come together in our human consciousness, of knowledge of our separateness coupled with the capability to bridge the space of our aloneness. "Pockets," a group of separate yet similar pieces, can represent security and strength in numbers or the celebration of variety achieved by natural process.

Sensuous appeal comes directly from the surface, color, and form of my sculpture. Through materials and the very process I employ, I hope to share my "sense of touch" and thus, on another level, my care and sensitivity in touching, interacting with the world around me. I am searching for a responsive quality in my work, a place between action and passivity. This quality is like a growing spiral where initial thoughts or feelings evoke the unique ideas and emotions of each viewer.

I find much of my imagery to be healing. Dream images such as budding plant forms are positive, evoking hope of things to come. Ovens are warm places for transformation. The rift of sexism can begin to be healed with strong, upright, yet open forms free of machismo and horizontal forms no longer passive, but activated by color, line, or gesture.

It is important to me how the volume of the inside and outside relate to the supporting structure. The interior space in the pieces suggests a private, Spiritual place containing emotions, dreams, thoughts, and inner realities. The outer surfaces refer to the more tangible side of ourselves that we present to the world which, like skin, are protective of underlying parts and may hide or hint of that which lies within. The openings to inside spaces are protected by implied or actual barriers. While the supporting structures of some of the pieces are clearly visible, others are concealed below the external skin. These structures represent that which is eternal and constant, like the building blocks of subatomic structure, the "Golden Rule," or our basic human needs. By revealing supporting structure or interior volume, I am acknowledging their importance and giving recognition to a beauty which is often hidden from sight.

I am attracted to depth of surface on three levels. Visually, the play of dark and light is elusive and rich. Tactilely, my hands feel compelled to explore the varied surfaces created. Intellectually, the shadows and recessed areas create mysterious dark places which beckon my natural impulse to explore the unknown.

The charcoal drawings offer me a more immediate process for the exploration of ideas and often lead to future sculpture pieces. In drawing, my imagination is given free rein to create a world free of the restrictions of gravity.

My art process has been one of integration. Socially, it is a challenge to be able to clearly share my art with others. Physically, the materials with which I work are sensuously appealing. Intellectually, the creative process itself is awing and I am humbled by the infinite paths which can be taken in solving problems. Art fosters my personal spiritual and psychological development and in so doing causes me to confront who I am.

SCULPTURE AND DRAWINGS

by

Marilyn Hurn Mohr

A thesis submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of

Master of Fine Arts

MONTANA STATE UNIVERSITY
Bozeman, Montana

August 1985

N378
M726
C.2

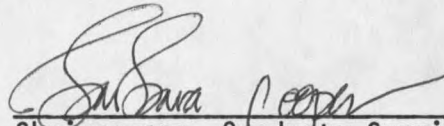

Approval

of a thesis submitted by

Marilyn Hurn Mohr

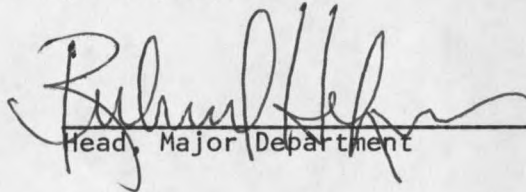

This thesis has been read by each member of the author's graduate committee and has been found to be satisfactory regarding content, English usage, format, citations, bibliographic style, and consistency, and is ready for submission to the College of Graduate Studies.

August 1st 1985
Date

Chairperson, Graduate Committee

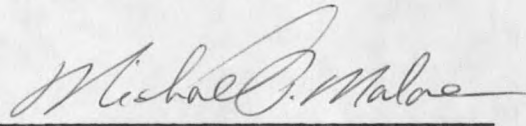

Approved for the Major Department

1 - AUGUST - 85
Date

Head, Major Department

Approved for the College of Graduate Studies

2 August 1985
Date

Graduate Dean

STATEMENT OF PERMISSION TO USE

In presenting this thesis in partial fulfillment of the requirements for a master's degree at Montana State University, I agree that the Library shall make it available to borrowers under rules of the Library. Brief quotations from this paper are allowable without special permission, provided that accurate acknowledgement of source is made.

Permission for extensive quotation from or reproduction of this paper may be granted by my major professor, or in his absence, by the Dean of Libraries when, in the opinion of either, the proposed use of the material is for scholarly purposes. Any copying or use of the material in this paper for financial gain shall not be allowed without my written permission.

Signature

Marlynn Hurm Mohr

Date

August 2, 1985

ARTIST'S STATEMENT

My images come from two sources: the inner world of dreams and the outer world of nature. I use metaphor, sensuous appeal, and formal relationships to achieve meaning.

Organic forms are the source of the metaphors I use: plant and animal forms refer to ideas of growth, transformation, infinite variation, and cycles of change. I want to combine the organic references with ideas of integration, security, and alienation. A single human-sized sculpture speaks of the simultaneous alienation and yearning to come together in our human consciousness, of knowledge of our separateness coupled with the capability to bridge the space of our aloneness. "Pockets," a group of separate yet similar pieces, can represent security and strength in numbers or the celebration of variety achieved by natural process.

Sensuous appeal comes directly from the surface, color, and form of my sculpture. Through materials and the very process I employ, I hope to share my "sense of touch" and thus, on another level, my care and sensitivity in touching, interacting with the world around me. I am searching for a responsive quality in my work, a place between action and passivity. This quality is like a growing spiral where initial thoughts or feelings evoke the unique ideas and emotions of each viewer.

I find much of my imagery to be healing. Dream images such as budding plant forms are positive, evoking hope of things to come. Ovens are warm places for transformation. The rift of sexism can begin to be healed with strong, upright, yet open forms free of machismo and horizontal forms no longer passive, but activated by color, line, or gesture.

It is important to me how the volume of the inside and outside relate to the supporting structure. The interior space in the pieces suggests a private, spiritual place containing emotions, dreams, thoughts, and inner realities. The outer surfaces refer to the more tangible side of ourselves that we present to the world which, like skin, are protective of underlying parts and may hide or hint of that which lies within. The openings to inside spaces are protected by implied or actual barriers. While the supporting structures of some of the pieces are clearly visible, others are concealed below the external skin. These structures represent that which is eternal and constant, like the building blocks of subatomic structure, the "Golden Rule," or our basic human needs. By revealing supporting structure or interior volume, I am acknowledging their importance and giving recognition to a beauty which is often hidden from sight.

I am attracted to depth of surface on three levels. Visually, the play of dark and light is elusive and rich. Tactilely, my hands feel compelled to explore the varied surfaces created. Intellectually, the shadows and recessed areas create mysterious dark places which beckon my natural impulse to explore the unknown.

The charcoal drawings offer me a more immediate process for the exploration of ideas and often lead to future sculpture pieces. In drawing, my imagination is given free rein to create a world free of the restrictions of gravity.

My art process has been one of integration. Socially, it is a challenge to be able to clearly share my art with others. Physically, the materials with which I work are sensuously appealing. Intellectually, the creative process itself is awing and I am humbled by the infinite paths which can be taken in solving problems. Art fosters my personal spiritual and psychological development and in so doing causes me to confront who I am.

LIST OF SLIDES

1. "They Bloom Once a Year"
1985
29½"x41½"
2. "Root Woman Looking Forward"
1985
41½"x29½"
3. "Hope Returning"
1985
41½"x29½"
4. "Armor for the Heart"
1984
41½"x29½"
5. Untitled
1984
41½"x29½"
6. Untitled
1984
41½"x29½"
7. "Tree Holding Up the Sky"
1985
41½"x29½"
8. "Cocoon"
1984
72"x27"x27"
9. "Incubation Place"
1985
53"x33"x24"
10. "Rooted"
1985
68"x28"x20"
11. "Tree Person"
1985
84"x54"x48"

12. "Uprooted"
1985
90"x28"x16"
13. "E-motion"
1985
34"x36"x32"
14. "Pockets"
1985
84"x70"x19"

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

MADE IN U.S.

9

10

11

12

13

14

